An Ode to our Farmer

*Did you choose to farm or did the farm choose you?
 The woes and worries of cattle, the sowing of crops, smells of a deep musk
 The smell of a farm intermingling with cigarettes, the scent of a Farmer.
 Your smell. The sweet perfume that was you, grandpa.
 We sat on your lap, we learned how to walk,
 We learnt lessons about life only you could have taught
 You got us up early, and showed us the reins;
 What it took to be a Farmer, the pains and the gains
 We didn't all have what it took, to step into your shoes
 But you still taught us "a thing or two".
 That family is important, to work hard is to succeed-
 Cause unconditional love and pride we'd always be guaranteed
 Stick up for each other, when one gets knocked down,
 That memories of the past will always live on.
 Always show humility and always be kind;
 Continue to laugh even if the world seems to have left you behind.
 Sweet memories of you will never be forgotten;
 Because a farmer you were but our grandpa you'll always be
 And we walk with you, through the wheatfields in our dreams.*
